➔ THE NEXT TIME YOU'RE

complaining about your hellish commute or dead-end job, consider Zakes' (William Ash) plight. His shifts are spent on a rain-lashed M1, affixing ads to service station toilets. Add an abrasive girlfriend, a naked woman caged in the back of a lorry idling at the lights and a brooding killer who's just made off with said girlfriend, and it promises to be quite a night for Zakes along Britain's first motorway. Owing much in tone to Wolf Creek (but set in a Moto), Hush exercises brevity, tension and satisfyingly bleak humour. Unrelenting until the final reel and with a series of admirable twists along the way, Hush is quite a journey. PW
